Your Wedding Day

And the Famous Men and Women Who Have Shared It With You.

By Mary Marshall

July 18.—J. G. Phelps Stokes and Rose Pastor.

Twelve years ago today J. G. Phelps Stokes was married to Rose Pastor. At the time of the marriage Mr. Stokes was 33 and his bride was 26. And, according to the newspaper accounts that attracted country-wide attention, the bride was a "poor Jewish girl of the east side," although, as a matter of fact, Miss Pastor had much to be proud of in her well-trained intellect and the light she had made in order to rise above the rank of factory worker. To be sure she had spent years as a cigar roller, but at the time of the meeting of Miss Pastor and Mr. Stokes she was engaged as a reporter for a Jewish newspaper on the east side.

Miss Pastor first met her future husband when she was sent by her paper to interview him. The Stokeses were persons of wealth and social position and some time before this Mr. Stokes' sister had started the world by marrying Robert Hunt, a settlement worker. Mr. Stokes was also interested in settlement work in New York city, and Miss Pastor interviewed him at the University settlement in New York. An invitation to dine at the settlement followed, and shortly after Miss Pastor took up the teaching of some of the groups in the settlement work. Nearly every day she was brought into association with Mr. Stokes. The first, apparently, was merely destined, for as Mr. Stokes said there was never any proposal. "What has happened," he said, "is inevitable. It was to be. We were to be married, but the idea was not approached formally. It was merely reached naturally in talking about the future—how we should live, how we should work."

The interview that Miss Pastor wrote as a result of her first meeting was reread with interest later on, and the closing paragraph may be of interest here.

"Mr. Stokes is very tall, and I believe, six foot of the most thorough democracy. A thoroughbred gentleman, a scholar and a son of a millionaire, he is a man of the common people, even as Lincoln was. He is a plain man and makes one feel perfectly at ease with him. Nor does he possess that one great fault that men of his kind generally possess, the pride of humility. He does not flaunt his democracy in one's face, but when his democracy is mentioned to him, he appears as glad as a child who is told by an appreciative parent, 'you have been a good boy today.'"

SAVE YOUR RECIPES.

Perhaps now, more than ever before, we are all in a good position to gain possession of really good recipes. For never before, it is certain, have so many persons of expert ability set their minds on the subject of food.

So it is that with the various kinds of rice, corn and corn meal and whole wheat flour and hominy and various other commodities that we buy now, we find little booklets containing really excellent recipes. They are not just recipes put together from old books by some business man sitting at an office desk. They are recipes worked out by experts with the purpose of making the most delicious dishes possible from the commodities in question.

And they are recipes quite worth saving and quite worth trying. Of course you won't have occasion to try them all. And some that you try you won't like as well as others that you try.

But save these recipes, and mark such as you find very satisfactory so that you can make use of them over and over again. You will find them a good means for enlarging your cooking vocabulary, so to speak.

Whenever you buy a package of the food in question, you will buy also, of course, one of the little booklets—that is, as long as they are contained in the package. So after you have bought two packages you will possess two copies of the booklet, naturally. Then you can cut the pages of the booklet apart and paste each recipe on a card or a sheet of your recipe book—or else each recipe that you have tried and found particularly worth while.

The recipes that you collect now will surely be of an economical sort. That is to say, they will be designed to give you the best food value possible for the least expenditure. And that is what a successful recipe in these war days should be.

So save up all the good recipes you can get together, try them and test them, and then make them a permanent part of your cook-book or card index recipe outfit.

"Rye mush—An old-time favorite was rye mush. To make it you will need a teaspoonful of rye flour and a pinch of salt. Make a thin paste of the flour with cold water in a stewpan. Then pour over it about two cupfuls of boiling water, put over the fire and stir for 20 minutes, adding more water if it gets too thick. It should be eaten with cream or milk, or, according to the old-fashioned idea, with a little molasses."

Tomato pancakes—Make a plain batter with one cup of flour sifted into a basin with one-fourth of a teaspoonful of salt. Add one well beaten egg and one-half cup of milk. Mix until smooth, then beat about three minutes. Add another half cup of milk. Take some well seasoned cooked spinach and rub through a sieve, add a few fine breadcrumbs slightly moistened with milk, about half the quantity of grated cheese, and season all with salt and pepper. Have this piping hot, and as each pancake is fried spread with some of the mixture and roll. Place them on a hot platter and pour over a thick, hot tomato sauce and serve.

Canned fruit and cake—Line a glass dish with slices of stale sponge cake or any other plain cake. Drain almost all the juice from a quart can of fruit and put the drained fruit in the dish lined with cake. Beat the whites of three eggs very stiff, add three level tablespoons of powdered sugar, beat in well, add enough of the fruit juice to flavor and color, and heap on the dessert. Serve at once.

To Overcome Redness, Tan, Freckles, Wrinkles

If your skin is unduly reddened, freckled or tanned, dab a little pure mercurized wax on the face and allow it to remain overnight. When you wash off the wax in the morning, the sticky, almost invisible particles of outside color will be removed, and the skin will be left clear, smooth and bright.

Repeating this daily, the entire outer skin is absorbed, but so gradually, there's not the slightest hurt or inconvenience. Even the stubbornest freckles are affected. The underlying skin which forms the new complexion is so fresh and youthful-looking, you'll marvel at the transformation. It's the only thing known to actually discard old skin, with freckles, blemishes or blotchy complexion. One ounce of mercurized wax, procurable at any drugstore, is sufficient in most cases.

If sun and wind make you squint and frown, you're bound to cultivate wrinkles. To prevent this, dab a little of the wax quickly, bathe the face in a solution made by dissolving an ounce of powdered salicylic acid in a half pint witch hazel.
